

Seahorses are small, weak swimming fish that live in seagrass beds. They curl their tails around seagrass blades and wait for food to float past. Seahorses eat by sucking water rapidly into their snout, pulling in small fish, shrimp, and zooplankton.